What is a TCK?

A third-culture kid is an individual who, having spent a significant part of his developmental years in a culture other than his parents' home culture, develops a sense of relationship to all of the cultures, while not having full ownership in any. Elements from each culture are incorporated into the life experience, but the sense of belonging is in relationship to others of similar experience.

You know you're an MK when:

- ◇ You can't answer the question, "Where are you from?"
- ◇ "Where are you from?" has more than one reasonable answer.
- ◇ You speak two languages, but can't spell either.
- ◇ You have a passport, but no driver's license.
- ◇ You speak with authority on the quality of airline travel.
- ◇ You sort your friends by continent.
- ◇ You believe vehemently that football is played with a round, spotted ball.
- ◇ Rain on a tile patio --or a corrugated metal roof-- is one of the most wonderful sounds in the world.
- ◇ You know how to pack

Crossing the ocean.....Again?!

Does the U.S. feel like a foreign country to you? Do you have questions about opening a bank account, or getting a job once you're in college? Are you nervous about making friends here in the States?

Our re-entry retreat offers help for these common concerns and more! We like to think of it as a resting place along your journey of life—a time to reflect and share about where you've been, as well as a time to think and prepare for your future. You will enjoy fun times with fellow TCKs, and learn new and practical things about yourself and others in order to make a smooth transition to college life in the U.S.

Here's what people are saying:

“God hears me and really is a friend that will listen and be there whenever I need him.”

“ I learned that it is OK to feel hurt. It is not wrong to be angry and confused but it is how you deal with it that matters. I also learned that we as humans, and especially as MKs, need someone to simply listen to us and understand us. Find those kinds of people in your life and grow in the Lord. If you need to do counseling then DO IT! There are so many things that I grew up believing that were not true and I can change my beliefs and seek out the truth. Even though it doesn't feel like it healing WILL come and God is there!”

“The biggest thing I learned this week, was that it is ok to be real with people. I was able to open up not only to people who cared, but to people who could partly understand because of their similar experience. Thank you!”
